The Colors Of Life

Synopsis

... Beams of bright light stream across the darkened rooftop to reflect upon the calm water, cutting through the lingering shadows while a bevy of pearly white swans glides peacefully about. Jeffrey M. Russo is inspired by the colors of life that have permeated his personal journey for many years. In his third collection of poetry, he shares lyrical musings that provide a glimpse into his view of the world around him, while conveying tales about beauty, friendship, humanity, and much more. As he explores thoughts, feelings, and the characters of the people he has met on his path through life, Russo reflects on the love of two women, a favorite pen that feels like an old friend, an exquisite red maple tree that still holds its dark vibrancy, the touch of cold air that surrounds jubilant crowds in Times Square, and a spectacular view from a high-rise window that looks upon a bustling city below. The Colors of Life shares a compilation of diverse poems that reflect on life, love, nature, and mortality.
